All of our produce is grown organically and our livestock is raised with great care and respect, our animals are pasture raised and our laying hens are free range.

As with any farming we are subject to the weather and pest problems, which can result in crop failures of certain vegetables or a late start to the season. There may be weeks where certain vegetables are not available. What is included in your weekly share is what is ripe and ready at that point in the season. By buying local organically grown produce you are receiving vegetables and herbs that are at their freshest and nutritionally their healthiest.
